

It is heartbreaking to witness the increasing violence and harassment towards Asian, Asian American, and Pacific Islander (AAPI) communities since the start of the pandemic. Viruses do not originate from nor are they spread by specific racial or ethnic groups, and we strongly reject both brash assertions and quiet insinuations to the contrary. With respect to the recent, horrific attack on members of the AAPI community in Atlanta, our hearts go out to the victims, their families, and to the broader community traumatized by these acts of hate and terrorism.

Meeting House Nursery School would like to encourage our families to stand in solidarity with Asian American, Pacific Islanders, and global Asian communities against racism, xenophobia, misogyny, acts of anti-Asian violence, and hate. It is our responsibility to build a better foundation for our children to thrive and grow, and to teach them to respect others and to be respected in our diverse community.
